It is a matter of pleasure that Biodiesel Association of India is organising its Second Global Convention and Exhibition on biodiesel on 1st and 2nd February 2008 at FICCI, New Delhi. Combining the issues of climate change and biodiesel is also very timely. Biodiesel has the potential of not only bringing environmental benefits but also in enhancing the productivity of uncultivable waste land and thereby enhancing the income of the rural people particularly those depending upon these lands.

In the years to come, biodiesel is going to form the backbone of energy security. We all need to encourage the efforts and entrepreneurship in this sector.

I wish the convention all success and assure all possible help in the efforts to promote biodiesel as a preferred and viable mode of energy.
